Revised Additional Program Curriculum Summary

Cognitive Behavioral Intervention for Substance Abuse (CBI-SA)

The Cognitive Behavioral Interventions for Substance Abuse (CBI-SA) is a curriculum designed for individuals that are moderate to high need in the area of substance abuse. This curriculum was developed by the University of Cincinnati Corrections Institute (UCCI) and is well suited for a criminal justice population. As the name of the curriculum suggests, this intervention relies on a cognitive-behavioral approach to teach participants strategies for avoiding substance abuse, and identifying and coping with risky situations. The program places heavy emphasis on skill building activities, including role plays to assist with cognitive, social, emotional, and coping skills development. Participants are required to do homework for every session to enhance the skills learned. Areas covered in the curriculum include motivational enhancement, cognitive restructuring, emotion regulation, social skills, problem solving, and success planning. The program is designed to be delivered two or three days a week for a total of 39 sessions.

Thinking for a Change (T4C)

The Thinking for a Change: An Integrated Approach to Changing Offender Behavior (T4C) curriculum, developed by Barry Glick, Jack Bush, and Juliana Taymans in cooperation with The National Institute of Corrections (NIC), "...uses a combination of approaches to increase offenders' awareness of themselves and others. It integrates cognitive restructuring, social skills, and problem solving. The program begins by teaching offenders an introspective process for examining their ways of thinking and their feelings, beliefs, and attitudes. The process is reinforced throughout the program. Social-skills training is provided as an alternative to antisocial behaviors. The program culminates by integrating the skills offenders have learned into steps for problem solving. Problem solving becomes the central approach offenders learn that enables them to work through difficult situations without engaging in criminal behavior" (Milkman & Wanberg, 2007). Combining the cognitive self-change, social skills, and problem solving the program consists of a total of 25 sessions to be delivered two to three times a week.

Individual Cognitive Behavioral Treatment (ICBT) Sessions

Individual Cognitive Behavioral Treatment sessions (ICBT) are designed to occur approximately twice monthly with offenders who are within 12 months of release. These sessions are intended to address their criminogenic need areas to reduce their risk for re-offending when released. During these sessions the case manager reviews the treatment plan with the offender to prioritize criminogenic need areas to be addressed. Then, the appropriate intervention is chosen to address that criminogenic need. These interventions include but are not limited to: Carey Guides, social skills, thinking reports, behavior chains, problem solving, and cost-benefit analysis. These interventions are intended to target individual criminogenic needs, emphasizing skills building, how to avoid risky situations, and role playing to cement new skills learned. Homework is also assigned after every session to further practice the skills learned to reduce their criminogenic needs and handle risky situations when released.

Note: Full curriculum will be provided prior to CoC Program implementation

Note: The above estimated percentages and dollar values are based on the history with our current Pilot CoC program at the Graceville facility. GEO reserves the right to increase and/or reduce the specific percentages and/or dollar values where necessary and remain within the Total Budget Cost for Post Release Services; any costs above the Total Budget Cost for Post Release Services will be at GEO's expense.

Transitional Housing: The goal is to link Post Release Participants to immediate housing upon release. Housing provides stability which enables returning citizens to focus on participating in necessary services (i.e., education, employment, treatment, and self-help groups). Estimated number is based upon inmates currently releasing with an unmet need. Average price of transitional beds are $25 per night.

Transportation: To ensure that our Post Release Participants have the capability to attend supportive services (i.e., treatment, school, work and supervising agencies), GEO plans to partner with local transportation companies to provide monthly bus passes for individuals compliant with their Release Action Plan. We have also identified organizations willing to provide bicycles for those in need. Estimated number based upon inmates currently releasing with an unmet transportation need. Average rate of monthly bus pass is $40.

Employment Services: GEO has established relationships with organizations that have a network of “felony friendly” employers. GEO will seek linkage to organizations assisting with vocational readiness courses. Estimated number based on inmates currently releasing with unmet employment services need. Services based on copay to attend employment readiness groups and placement services average $50 monthly.

Education Services: GEO will establish working relationships with organizations that enables Post Release Participants to obtain a High School Equivalency (HSE) certificate. In addition, we will promote continued higher education when applicable. Estimated number based upon inmates currently releasing with unmet continuing education needs. $50 service based upon HSE classes and cost to take GED test.

Clothing Assistance: To ensure that our Post Release Participants have the ability to dress accordingly for job searches, employment, and any community based service they may be attending, GEO will establish relationships with providers and provide a one-time stipend for clothing based upon need.

Food Assistance: GEO has established relationships with providers in the community to assist Post Release Participants with obtaining food upon their release. This connection will provide the Participant with a food voucher for up to three months.

Aftercare Treatment: Based upon the needs of Post Release Participants, ongoing post release aftercare treatment may be recommended. We plan to partner with quality community based organizations that provide substance abuse, anger management, parenting, mental health, and any other supportive programs which reduce the risk to recidivate. Estimated number based on inmates currently releasing with an unmet aftercare treatment need. Assume two sessions per month at $25 per session.
